Path to Transfer

El Camino College graduate Joseph Luck said joining the Honors Transfer Program (HTP) was one of his best academic decisions. Through the HTP, he met a group of students who helped him kick his studies into high gear.

"HTP gave me a chance to do my own research, things I'd never really thought about before," said Joseph, a Mira Costa High School grad who recently transferred to UCLA. "You can choose your own path."

The HTP prepares highly motivated students to transfer to a university and complete a bachelor's degree. Research conferences are part of the program – Joseph was honored with the Exemplary Student Award this past spring at the Honors Transfer Council of California Student Research Conference.

Cost Comparison

El Camino College offers an excellent education at the best value

It costs California residents only about $1,400 per year to attend El Camino College. We offer the same general education courses as UC and CSU schools – and students save thousands of dollars. In fact, students can earn their bachelor’s degree with half the amount of student debt just by starting at ECC and then transferring to a four-year college or university.

A full-time student enrolled in 12 units for two semesters pays $1,400 per year in enrollment fees at El Camino College, in comparison to $31,200 (private), $14,700 (UC), and $6,700 (CSU).
