El Camino College Students Awarded Scholarships

Sisters' Alumni of the South Pacific (SASP) recently awarded two of 19 scholarships for 2007-08 to El Camino College students Sean Maika Enesi, a mechanical engineering major; and Sione Tunu, business major.

SASP is a non-profit organization comprised of women who traversed from American Samoa, Germany and Samoa. The group's primary goal is to encourage educational opportunities among all men and women of Pacific Islander heritage residing in the United States and throughout the Pacific region. To reach that goal, SASP members award funds annually received from fundraisers during a given year by way of scholarships to students who apply and meet the criteria.

Scholarships are distributed to community colleges and universities throughout the country. Scholarships cover tuition, fees, books and other school-related expenses. The scholarship amounts awarded are up to a maximum of $1,500.
