El Camino College Community Education Launches New History Series, “Ten Years After”

The El Camino College Community Education program recently launched a new history series titled, “Ten Years After.”

The four-part series is designed as an exploration of our nation's recent history and led by writer/director John Powers, widely known throughout the South Bay for the innovative theater series “Works in Progress.” Participants will gain insight into recent headline-grabbing events by looking back at our recent past. “Ten Years After” will examine through text, visual imagery, and discussion, several major events from the year 2003. Ample time will be available for students to share their own recollections of the events.

Remaining sessions in the series begin at 6:30 p.m. in El Camino College’s Haag Recital Hall and include: “The Invasion of Iraq,” March 7; “Completion of the Human Genome Project,” April 4; and the “California Gubernatorial Recall and Election,” May 2.
