El Camino College Receives $25,000 Donation from Edison International Gift Will Support STEM Scholarships

El Camino College recently received a $25,000 donation from Edison International to support science, technology, engineering and mathematics (STEM) scholarships for outstanding students. This is the third consecutive annual grant for STEM scholarships that El Camino College has received from Edison International since 2012.

Students working toward calculus-based degrees in math, engineering and science-related fields will be eligible to apply for these STEM-focused scholarships. Twenty students will be awarded $1,000-$1,500 scholarships.

Edison has been a longtime industry partner of El Camino College, providing student scholarships, mentors for aspiring scientists and engineers, and job initiative grants.

The recent Edison International donation is part of the El Camino College Foundation Scholarship program, which continues to grow each year to provide critical support to students in a variety of academic disciplines. Approximately $1.4 million was awarded to hundreds of students for the 2014-15 academic year.
