UCLA Extension Courses Open for Fall 2015 at El Camino College Classes begin September 21, 2015

UCLA Extension will offer classes this fall at El Camino College in three thriving industries: accounting & finance, engineering & project management, and patient advocacy. Courses begin Sept. 21 and are scheduled during the evening hours.

UCLA Extension offers courses taught by experienced instructors right on the El Camino College campus. The continuing education courses enable professionals to advance in their fields, remain current, contribute to their company's success, or transition to new opportunities. Courses can also be applied toward a certificate from UCLA Extension.

Accounting & Finance courses offer a real-world education that can be put into practice immediately. Students will learn the ins and outs of personal money management, auditing, and business economics. Courses include financial auditing and business economics.

For those interested in gaining advanced tools for project management, leadership, manufacturing, and aerospace, Engineering & Project Management courses include: fundamentals of project management, leadership and the human element, world-class manufacturing principles, and space mission systems engineering.

After completing the Patient Advocate program, students will be able to help patients find answers and options in the health care system. Patient advocates help navigate the complex medical system on behalf of patients, who don't always know their options for treatment, or how to access them.

About UCLA Extension

UCLA Extension is the continuing education division of the University of California, Los Angeles. UCLA Extension offers evening, weekend, and online courses and certificates for professionals in business, management, engineering, information systems, entertainment studies, public policy, public health, the humanities and many other fields.
