It has been noted by this reviewer over time, that when questions are presented that require analysis , and when answers require conclusions based upon that analysis, students tend to have more difficulty and that was the case in the results for this SLO. Corpus Delicti concepts have been difficult for students to master. They easily memorize the elements of this concept but struggle to apply its principles in hypothetical scenarios. I have discussed this problem with colleagues and we are in agreement to keep increasing focus on this concept and develop additional lesson strategies to improve understanding. Standard Met? :Yes Semester and Year Assessment Conducted:2014-15 (Fall 2014) Faculty Assessment Leader:R Lewis   | 09/01/2017 - The curriculum for this course is constantly revised as the field of Criminal Law is dynamic. However, the students were required to read a fact situation that contained multiple rules of evidence. The students needed to, as they read, identify situations that required the application of an evidence rule and then find the corresponding question on the exam. This is daunting task. Having said that, I think that as stated for SLO #1, a review of the exam questions might result in some revisions to make the questions more clear. | Action Category:Curriculum Changes  |
| ECC: AJ 131 - Legal Aspects of Evidence - SLO #3 Legal Brief from Published Case Decision - After receiving instruction in legal research, successful AJ 131 students will be able to locate a case decision in a published law book or online website, read said decision and prepare a legal brief using proper format. Course SLO Assessment Cycle:2014-15 (Fall 2014)2017-18 (Spring 2018) Input Date:11/29/2013 Course SLO Status:Active | Assessment Method Description:Examine graded legal papers submitted to determine a) whether the student successfully located a case decision in a published law book or online source and b) whether submitted a paper that contained proper information in the correct format. Assessment Method:Term/Research Paper Standard and Target for Success:75% | 09/05/2014 - 21 students out of 28 who finished the course through research, were able to locate case decisions through the sources provided to them and submitted acceptable papers contained the required information and using correct format. Standard Met? :Yes Semester and Year Assessment Conducted:2014-15 (Fall 2014) Faculty Assessment Leader:Ray Lewis Faculty Contributing to Assessment:None Reviewer's Comments:I was pleased with the results of this SLO. Students followed instructions for the most part and 75% of them were able to submit acceptable papers and used proper format as was required of them. No additional action required for this SLO.   | 09/05/2016 - Although the students met the target for success, our curriculum is continually reviewed to ensure it is current and relevant.
