FAMILY CONTRIBUTION APPEAL

The financial aid application, FAFSA or CADA, uses your family's annual income from almost two years ago to project how much your family can afford to contribute to your expenses while you attend college. This projection assumes that family income is usually stable over the course of time. While the FAFSA/CADA form does not give the student the opportunity to explain a circumstance that could affect his or her ability to pay for college; federal and state law allow authorized officials in our office to make certain adjustments to your income data so that it accurately reflects your family's situation. These types of adjustments are made in accordance with our Professional Judgment Policy on a case-by-case basis.

If your family has experienced one or more of the following situations, you may qualify for an adjustment to the information on your FAFSA/CADA. Making these types of adjustments may result in increased financial aid eligibility.

CHANGES WARRANTING A REVIEW ARE LIMITED TO THE SPECIFIC SITUATIONS BELOW:

- Loss of income due to unemployment, disability, or retirement
- Termination of benefits or income such as child support, alimony, SS Benefits
- One-time occurrence of income such as a debt cancellation or IRA withdrawal
- Exceptional medical and/or dental expenses incurred, not paid by insurance
- Divorce or separation that occurred after that FAFSA/CADA was filed
- Death of a parent or spouse that occurred after the FAFSA/CADA was filed
- Change in the number of family members in household provided you or your parents support greater than 50%

APPEAL GUIDELINES

In order for our department to make a complete determination of your appeal, you must clearly demonstrate a change in the family's financial situation. Consideration will be reviewed for changes that occur during the current tax year. For example, we will consider change in financial situation for 2022 tax year for financial aid application filed for the 2022-2023 aid/academic year.

Our office will use the information provided to determine if your appeal could make an impact to your financial aid award. Submission of this appeal does not guarantee an increase in aid. If you have incorrectly reported information on your FAFSA/CADA application, this review could negatively impact your EFC (expected family contribution) resulting in a loss/reduction of your current financial aid. Please review the information on your FAFSA/CADA application for accuracy before submitting an appeal.

Please note: If the EFC on your FAFSA/CADA application already shows $0, this indicates that you are eligible for the maximum financial aid. Financial aid officials are unable to make any changes to your financial information that would allow for additional financial aid, therefore it may not be in your best interest to collect documents to submit a family contribution appeal.

Please allow 2-4 weeks for processing time as Family Contribution Appeals will be reviewed in the order received. You will be notified by the Financial Aid Office when your appeal has been processed, or if any additional information is required.

Please note, if selected for verification, your appeal will not be reviewed until after verification has been completed.

DOCUMENTATION REQUIREMENTS

LOSS OF INCOME: a result of layoff/unemployment, disability, retirement, death, divorce/separation, child, or spousal support.

If applicable, the following documentation required:

- Complete signed tax return and all W-2s (REQUIRED for all appeals with changes in income)
- Anticipated income for current tax year
- Three (3) most current earnings statements from each job
- If laid off, letter of termination from employer and copy of final earnings statement
