Spring 2022 Professional Development Day Program

Breakout Sessions

2:00pm - 3:00pm

Building Community in the Honors Transfer Program

In honor of our return to campus, this session will focus on how honors faculty can help build community in the Honors Transfer Program. We will begin with a student panel in which honors students share what gives them a sense of community (or lack thereof!) in the HTP. Then, honors faculty will brainstorm ways that we can build community in our honors classes and as a program as a whole.

Presenters: Rachel Williams & Kassia Wosick

Location: SOCS 119

Exploring Career Services & Resources

Having a career is a central process to all of our lives - a cyclical pattern of reflection, exploration and implementation with various milestones. Particularly for our students, who are here to progress toward their educational and career goals, the journey can not only feel overwhelming and demanding, but also uncertain - especially during these turbulent times of the pandemic. We at the Career Center are here to support students in their career needs but we also understand the greater role the ECC campus community as a whole can play in influencing and positively impacting students' career development. Come join us as we break down how you can begin having career discussions with students in your respective spaces and departments along with an introduction to the various career resources available to faculty, staff, and students to utilize. And finally, let's discuss collaborative efforts we can envision to bring the Career Center to your respective student-centered spaces.

Presenter: Henry Ta

Location: SOCS 120

Legislative and Case Law Update for Criminal Justice Professionals

This session will cover legislative and case law updates. In the wake of "defund the police" the California Legislature was very busy in 2021. This session is designed for Administration of Justice faculty as well as members of our Campus Police Department. You will be informed of changes in statutory law enacted in the current California legislative session that will impact law enforcement and training in 2022 and beyond. The course also brings you the latest court cases that impact law enforcement and Administration of Justice curriculum.

Presenter: Mark Fields

Location: SOCS 121

Looking at Your Hybrid Course - Next Steps

(DE PD)

What is working well for you as you convert your fully online courses to hybrid courses? Is there anything that is not working? Much like the transition to completely online, there may be unexpected bumps that occur as faculty transition to hybrid teaching. This session is less of a workshop and more of a conversation where colleagues can share their experiences developing hybrid courses. Listening to feedback from faculty on these experiences will allow the Department of Online and Digital Education to provide better support in the future which then allows an overall better experience for our students.

Presenter: Ryan Martinez & Moses Wolfenstein

Location: SOCS 122

Make Research Cool Again

If you assign research and long form writing, come and discuss together strategies to inform and refine those assignments. I'd love to share a handful of research-based techniques that can help you make the most of your research assignments, demystify the process for students, and help the assignment be student-centered and equity-minded. I have a few tricks to show you, but, more importantly, I'd like to spend a lot of time listening to you and what you do, tapping into the collective wisdom of our space, and offering each other community as we consider the humanizing possibilities of our curriculum--and dare I say, the fun in research essays! I know together we can transform research papers all over campus into legacy assignments that promote social justice, help develop critical consciousness, and center student growth.
